In Dedication...

The Wake Forest University Class of 2008 is honored to dedicate this edition of the Gray Matter

to

Dr. Walter Roufail

*Professor of Internal Medicine
Department of Gastroenterology*

After many years of dedication to medical education, Dr. Roufail, now in his seventies, will be retiring after watching the graduation of the Class of 2008. Dr. Roufail has taught generations of medical students (in both clinical and nonclinical years), PA students, and house staff. We, the Class of 2008, are honored to have known Dr. Roufail, and hope that the dedication of this book to him is a small reminder of the role he has played in our lives over the last four years, and will continue to play as we become practicing physicians. For this, we thank you!

*-Sincerely,
The Class of 2008*

Third Year

True clinical training begins in the the third year, marking the transition from "book learning" to the actual practice and art of medicine. Pre-rounding before 5AM, overnight call, and being paged constantly may sound rough, but the experiences of delivering a baby, standing in the OR, or sitting with a dying patient for the first time really begin the transition to becoming a physician.

Second Year

No longer new to medical school, second year is a time for both professional and personal growth.

Students return refreshed from a summer break of research, travel, or Healthcare for the Underserved ready to jump into more 'practical' learning.

Still, the year is defined by the ever looming "boards," or USMLE Step 1 Licensing exam, the first major national exam medical students are required to take prior to beginning third year.

First Year

It is an overwhelming time - walking past Bowman Gray for orientation, followed the next week by anatomy lab... and the firsts keep coming. New friends, new places. The first time visiting patients in the hospital, learning how to use a stethoscope. And really, it's all about learning how to become a doctor, and the responsibility that includes.

Physician Assistant Students

As PA students we strive to become vital members of the healthcare team.

Our 2-year program includes a year of academic, clinical, and basic science studies, a Master's project designed to teach life-long learning skills, and a year of clinical rotations geared toward all aspects of the medical field while working closely with and alongside other medical professionals,

Graduate Students

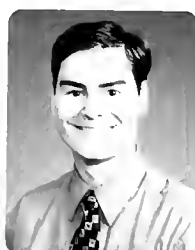

Graduate students participate actively in research in dozens of fields ranging from cancer biology to infectious diseases. While coursework is part of their learning process, the majority of their time is spent actively involved in research projects under the direction of a principle investigator.

As third and fourth year medical students, you become well acquainted with the hospital's house staff. Residents become your teachers, your friends, and to whom you aspire to be. They represent the completion of our journey as they begin the lifelong practice of medicine.

*"The education of the doctor which goes on

- John Shaw Billings

Faculty

The faculty encompasses all those individuals responsible for medical, PA and graduate student teaching.

Some teach only in the classroom, some only on the wards, and others play a critical role in bridging the gap between both worlds. They push us and shape our education, teaching us to teach ourselves.

*"The dream begins with a teacher who believes in you,
who tugs and pushes and leads you to the next plateau, sometimes poking you with a sharp stick called
'truth'."*

Dr. Walter Bo

After earning his Ph.D. at the University of Cincinnati in 1953, Dr. Walter Bo joined the medical faculty at the University of North Dakota before moving to Bowman Gray in 1963. At the end of this year

Dr. Bo will be retiring - retirement being relative! Dr. Bo will continue to assist in the Anatomy Course all students take during the first 12 weeks of medical school. In addition, he has recently published a new edition of his renowned textbook, the Basic Atlas of Sectional Anatomy that includes correlated radiographic imaging.

Dr. Bo, we thank you for terrifying us, teaching us, and making us better physicians. We are proud to know you and grateful for your time.

Dr. Julia Cruz

Dr. Cruz will be retiring from the Department of Hematology & Oncology at the Wake Forest University School of Medicine. She has been actively involved in the teaching of the Hematology Basic Science block and in clinical teaching.

You have been with us in the beginning. You have taught us basic science and clinical applications, supported us in our education and our lives, and shown us better ways to be doctors. Perhaps more importantly you remembered us by name (no, we do not forget when we get cards or email from you) and singled us out of the 'herd' from the first day, marking us each as individuals. We are sad to see you leaving, but are so grateful that you have made the journey with us.

The Class of 2008

Student Interest Groups

Students are introduced to the interest groups during orientation week. These groups provide valuable lectures, information and hands-on early experience about particular medical specialties, a lot of fun and a way to connect with individuals of similar interests and ideals. Groups such as these allow students to take part in volunteer activities and serve in leadership roles.

Student Life

In the Student Life section, we'll try to give you a glimpse of what it's like to be a student at "the Baptist" as it is affectionately known. Some of the events focus mainly on medical students, but expect to see a mix of medical, graduate, and PA students on the following pages! Each day is a crazy adventure, and we invite you to take a look back at what we've done for the past year.

Orientation

Orientation for the incoming first year class traditionally begins in late July. While the daytime sessions serve to teach students about the medical center and resources available to students, the nighttime events serve as a means to mingle with faculty and other students, helping to break the ice and form essential early bonds and friendships.

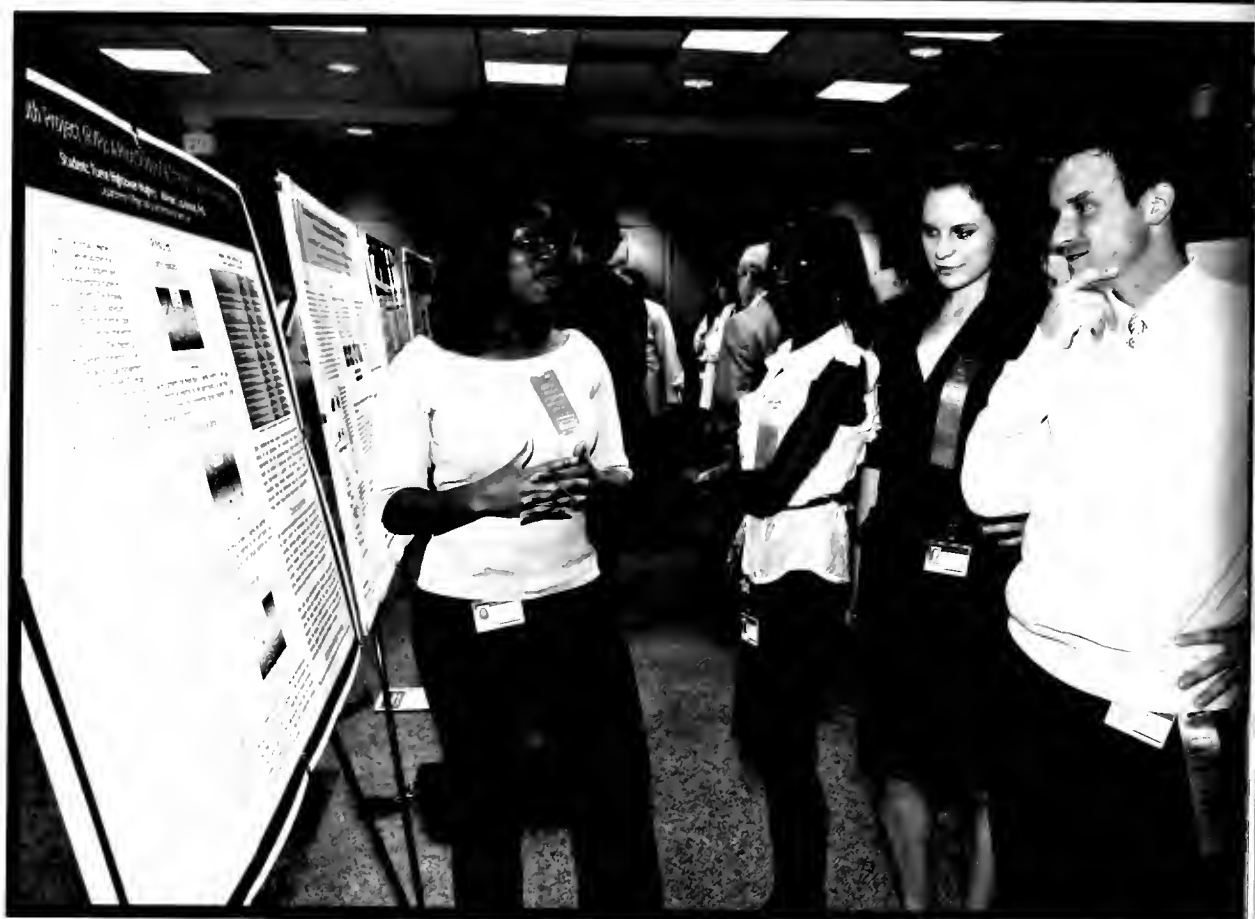

Fall Convocation

The White Coat Ceremony that is part of Fall Convocation is an important milestone where medical students receive their official "short coats". These coats mark the budding student physicians and are worn until graduation, after which newly minted physicians are entitled to wear the 'long coat' marking them as doctors.

Medical Student Research Day

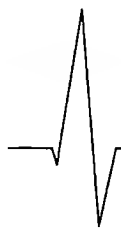

Each year, dozens of medical students participate in Medical Student Research Day, presenting posters on projects they have participated in or designed and performed over the past year. Many students receive NIH grants, particularly between the first and second years. And of course, there's a little friendly competition, with judges from among the faculty deciding the winner.

Halloween Party

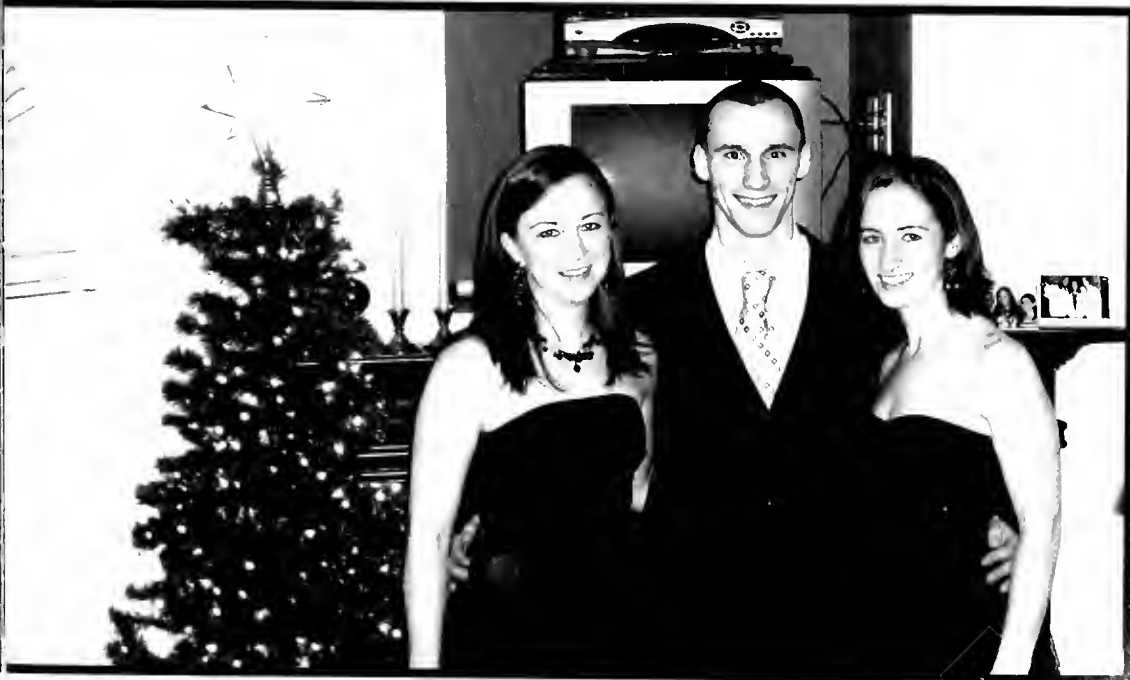

Holiday Ball

The Holiday Ball, also known as the medical school "prom" takes place in early December of each year. Semiformal attire and a fancy evening at the Sawtooth Center allow everyone to show a different side of themselves outside of jeans for the classroom or scrubs for the wards.

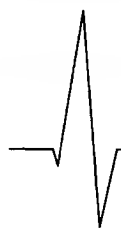

Share the Health Fair

The Share the Health Fair is an annual event at Marketplace Mall run by students from the medical and PA schools and provides basic screening and health information to underserved populations in Winston-Salem. Hundreds of students volunteer for the multi-day event and faculty and staff turn out as well, all in the spirit of giving back to the community.

The Final Days: Class of 2008

After two years of passing each other in the halls, the Class of 2008 came back together for Match Day, for the last few weeks of our medical education, and for the last round of weddings while still in school. And while a great many things have changed over the last four years, a comforting number of things stayed the same.

Match Day

"What we call the beginning is often the end. And to make an end is to make a beginning. The end is where we start from."

- T.S. Eliot

Match Day is probably the most awaited day of medical school (next to graduation itself). It is that magical Thursday in March when soon-to-be-doctors nationwide find out where they will be performing their residency (and for some, what specialty they will be in). Match Day itself is a time of celebration, relaxation, and relief following one of the most stressful times in medical school and coming before the flurry of graduation and moving to new jobs and towns. It is a day shared with friends and family, with flurries of phone calls, sometimes tears, and often smiles.

"Come quickly, I am tasting the stars! "

- Dom Perignon

"Just about a month from now I'm set adrift, with a diploma for a sail and lots of nerve for oars."

Phase V

During Phase V, the Class of 2008 came back together for seminars, workshops, and ACLS recertification - of course, a little bit of fun had to be involved as well, including the First Annual "Burn One Down Party," where the hated short white coats went up in a blaze of glory.

A Word From The Deans

Dear Graduates,

At Wake Forest University, every medical school class seems exceptional, and the Class of 2008 is no exception. You have distinguished yourselves through your academic achievements, your contributions to society, your resourcefulness, and your perseverance. I am privileged to have been a part of your passage from accomplished college graduates, eager to tackle the challenges of medical school, into proud possessors of the M.D. degree. I congratulate all of you on this notable achievement.

As your experience no doubt has taught you, each step along the pathway you have chosen is a greater test of your mettle than the last, and therefore presents a challenge that is both daunting and compelling. I assure you that you are well prepared to ascend to the next level - residency training. I say this with confidence because your success as physicians, individually and collectively, is uppermost among our goals as we continually refine and improve the medical school experience for our students. We take pride in our graduates and their post-medical school performance, and once again, your class will be no exception.

In the years to come, I will follow with interest how your class fulfills its aspirations as family physicians, specialists and subspecialists, teachers, leaders in medical research, leaders in organized medicine, and leaders in community service. I especially look forward to becoming reacquainted with you not as dean and student but as peers in the profession we honor and share.

To the Class of 2008, congratulations on reaching this milestone on the way to achieving your ultimate goals. You are now graduates of Wake Forest University School of Medicine. You're exceptional.

Sincerely,

Bill Applegate

To the Class of 2008,

Thank you for the honor and privilege of working with you as you've developed into competent, caring, and compassionate physicians. You've been a true inspiration, and a constant reminder of why those of us who preceded you went into medicine. You are what's good about our profession, and I look forward to hearing about the great things you'll be doing with your patients and your lives. You make our school (and me) proud.

Class of 2008 -

Congratulations!

You have accomplished some remarkable things.

There is a lot that is happening in your amazingly complex life.

Now do yourself a real favor.

Stop all of that.

Don't stop it totally. Don't stop it all the time. But stop it for a while, every day.]

Disconnect.

Find a time to disconnect yourself from your iPod, your cell phone, your pager, your e-mail, your television, and all the other commotion that you confuse with being alive.

[All of your multi-tasking is multi-distracting, and it is injurious to your well-being.]

Get away from the commotion for a little while.

Find a space where things are so quiet that you are the only one present. It could be in the shower, in your car, on a park bench...the location doesn't matter.

Here is what matters:

Alone.

Quiet.

Your refuge should be so quiet, so free of distraction, that you can be mesmerized by the track of a raindrop drizzling down the windowpane.

[You should be so alone that you don't feel obliged to explain to anyone else that you are mesmerized by the track of a raindrop drizzling down the windowpane.]

And in the solitude and the quiet, you will find more than the drizzle; you will discover that a storm is raging.

"Life does not consist mainly, or even largely, of facts and happenings.
It consists mainly of the storm of thought that is forever flowing through one's head."
- Mark Twain

Find time to listen to the storm.

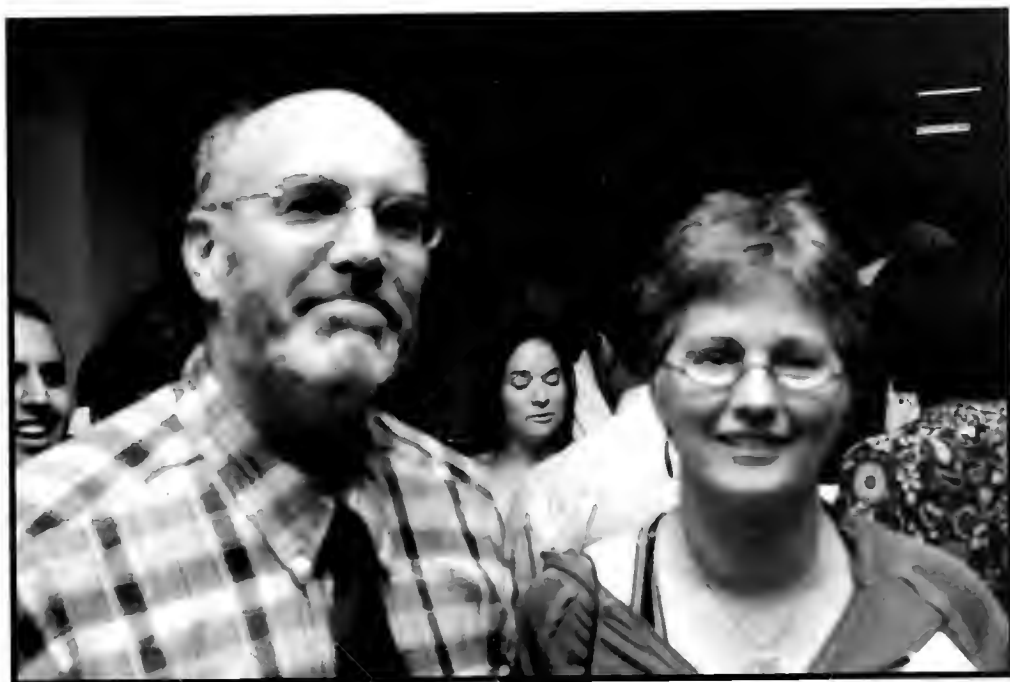

Dr. Ober

Dear Class of 2008:

We wish you the very best as you leave medical school to pursue the next step of your journey in medicine. You have worked hard and the fruits of your labors will benefit mankind. Thanks for letting us be a part of your past four years. It has been a pleasure to watch you develop from students in the anatomy lab, to participants in small groups, to the eager young doctors in the clinics and now to competent physicians. As you go from here, be bold and dare to live life creatively. We look forward to hearing from you in the years to come. So long, be happy!

- Jim and Marcia Wofford

To the Woffords:

We thank you for the four years of dedication you have given us. You have walked our path with us since the beginning, and we are joyous that you will be with us to celebrate as we end this leg of our journey. You have given us your time, your thoughts, your support; you have opened your home to us. In doing so, you have become more than mentors - you have become part of our family. With grateful hearts, we thank you.

*With love,
The Class of 2008*

With Thanks

Office of Student Services

To the ladies of Student Services who have made our time in medical school a bit easier, we offer our thanks. Not only have you helped us meet deadlines and kept us on track, but you have provided emergency candy and every other kind of care we can imagine! We appreciate all the encouragement and support you have provided us over the past four years.

To Our Loved Ones

We could not have made it without you - without your understanding of late nights and early mornings, of tears and frustrations.

We could not have made it without someone to tell us about the better things in life when we had gotten almost too far down to remember why we were doing this crazy thing.

We could not have made it without laughter and joy, birthday parties, weddings, babies, and the rest of life that keeps going on while we work ridiculous hours.

We will carry our memories of all you have done and continue to do for us with us on the next step of our journey. Thank you.

*Love,
The Class of 2008*

*Dr. Joseph "Mac"

Associate Dean of Student Services

After several years serving as Associate Dean of Student Services for Wake Forest University School of Medicine, Dr. Ernest will be leaving Wake Forest to take a position as Department Chair of Obstetrics & Gynecology at Carolinas Medical Center in Charlotte, NC in July of 2008 where he will continue to be involved in medical education.

Dear Dr. Ernest -

Thank you for your humor and guidance through some of the most trying years of our lives. We are grateful that you will be with us through the end of our time as medical students. We wish you all the best in Charlotte!

Always smiling, with her energy reserve topped off, she has seen the next horizon and moved inexorably towards it and beyond. With the nature and grace of the dancer she is, her presence seems to brighten the moment, her sense of humor lifting the spirits of those around her and her unchanging care and concern providing comfort to others. As she has risen above the norm as a daughter, dancer, student and woman, so will she be equally special as doctor and healer.

The Gray Matter, Volume 64, was produced by the yearbook staff at Wake Forest University School of Medicine and was printed by Jostens in Winston-Salem, NC. The account was serviced by Ben Wade, Sales Representative, and John Fletcher, Plant Consultant. Lynn Snyder served as adviser.

The cover was designed by Holly Langmuir and Dana Winn. It is a four color lithograph with gold foil application. The end sheets are made of 150 pound Ceontempore Recycled Paper.

All layouts of this yearbook were submitted online via the Jostens Yearbook Avenue Designer. The 248 pages of this book were printed on 80 pound High Gloss Paper on Heidelberg Speedmaster Six Color Press.

All photographs were digital or digitized. The cover art photograph was taken by Holly Langmuir. The portrait and various other photos were taken by Creative Communications and provided to us by Linda Arcure. Members of the Classes of 2008, 2009, 2010, and 2011, the Physician Assistant Program, and the Graduate Studies Program provided candid photographs.
